

Inside the Shell

Test Fonts

FOREWORD

Roboto 12

Michele Usher's photographic essay focuses on the lives of the women living in the tiny fishing village of Ngawi located in the Wairarapa region of New Zealand which occupies the south-east corner of the North Island. It is a sparsely settled, rural region. Physically, the Wairarapa consists of the broad flat valley of the Ruamahanga River running north to south down the western side with the majority of the region steep hill country to the east. The area is bordered by the rugged Tararua and Remutaka Mountain Ranges on the west and the Mount Bruce hills to the north. Along the east and the south runs the 220 km coastline.

Geography 12

Michele Usher's photographic essay focuses on the lives of the women living in the tiny fishing village of Ngawi located in the Wairarapa region of New Zealand which occupies the south-east corner of the North Island. It is a sparsely settled, rural region. Physically, the Wairarapa consists of the broad flat valley of the Ruamahanga River running north to south down the western side with the majority of the region steep hill country to the east. The area is bordered by the rugged Tararua and Remutaka Mountain Ranges on the west and the Mount Bruce hills to the north. Along the east and the south runs the 220 km coastline.

Microsoft Sans Serif 12

Michele Usher's photographic essay focuses on the lives of the women living in the tiny fishing village of Ngawi located in the Wairarapa region of New Zealand which occupies the south-east corner of the North Island. It is a sparsely settled, rural region. Physically, the Wairarapa consists of the broad flat valley of the Ruamahanga River running north to south down the western side with the majority of the region steep hill country to the east. The area is bordered by the rugged Tararua and Remutaka Mountain Ranges on the west and the Mount Bruce hills to the north. Along the east and the south runs the 220 km coastline.

Open Sans 12

Michele Usher's photographic essay focuses on the lives of the women living in the tiny fishing village of Ngawi located in the Wairarapa region of New Zealand which occupies the south-east corner of the North Island. It is a sparsely settled, rural region. Physically, the Wairarapa consists of the broad flat valley of the Ruamahanga River running north to south down the western side with the majority of the region steep hill country to the east. The area is bordered by the rugged Tararua and Remutaka Mountain Ranges on the west and the Mount Bruce hills to the north. Along the east and the south runs the 220 km coastline.

Franklin Gothic 12

Michele Usher's photographic essay focuses on the lives of the women living in the tiny fishing village of Ngawi located in the Wairarapa region of New Zealand which occupies the south-east corner of the North Island. It is a sparsely settled, rural region. Physically, the Wairarapa consists of the broad flat valley of the Ruamahanga River running north to south down the western side with the majority of the region steep hill country to the east. The area is bordered by the rugged Tararua and Remutaka Mountain Ranges on the west and the Mount Bruce hills to the north. Along the east and the south runs the 220 km coastline.

Didot 12

Michele Usher's photographic essay focuses on the lives of the women living in the tiny fishing village of Ngawi located in the Wairarapa region of New Zealand which occupies the south-east corner of the North Island. It is a sparsely settled, rural region. Physically, the Wairarapa consists of the broad flat valley of the Ruamahanga River running north to south down the western side with the majority of the region steep hill country to the east. The area is bordered by the rugged Tararua and Remutaka Mountain Ranges on the west and the Mount Bruce hills to the north. Along the east and the south runs the 220 km coastline.

Times New Roman12

Michele Usher's photographic essay focuses on the lives of the women living in the tiny fishing village of Ngawi located in the Wairarapa region of New Zealand which occupies the south-east corner of the North Island. It is a sparsely settled, rural region. Physically, the Wairarapa consists of the broad flat valley of the Ruamahanga River running north to south down the western side with the majority of the region steep hill country to the east. The area is bordered by the rugged Tararua and Remutaka Mountain Ranges on the west and the Mount Bruce hills to the north. Along the east and the south runs the 220 km coastline.